THE QUOTES

"Chad was a very committed and hard working player and has carried that into his coaching career. He possesses very high basketball IQ and has a tremendous feel on how to communicate and relate with young people. I'd love for my son to play for him."

Bill Self
Head Coach
Kansas University

"Chad's passion for basketball combined with his commitment to developing players both on-and-off the court separates him as a coach. I have the utmost respect for his leadership and character both as a person and a coach."

Ritchie McKay
Associate Head Coach
University of Virginia

"Chad was one of the smartest and most competitive players I've been around. He's turned into an outstanding coach. He possesses a great knowledge of the game, forges a strong rapport with his players, and has an unbeatable passion to teach and help his players improve."

Scott Sutton
Head Coach
Oral Roberts University

UNSEEN VICTORY

In basketball, we all know about particular kinds of victory: scoreboards, statistics, scholarships, and pro contracts. But there is a greater, co-existing victory that is unseen, yet is far more important because it has an eternal benefit and produces character. Unlike the more well-known (and easier to see) victory, it can be won or lost in every game and every practice. The victory I speak of is the victory of the heart (the heart being the “wellspring of life”). The victory of the heart must have our highest priority and our complete devotion. It is the essence of life in the Kingdom of God. Jesus said, “Seek first the Kingdom of God and all these things (the other, readily seen victory) will be added unto you.” Thus, we must pursue, first and foremost, the greater, unseen victory of the heart. In basketball, what are the characteristics or elements of the victory of the heart? I believe they are as follows;

1. Effort

All-out, 100% in practice, games, and off-season prep

2. Courage

Perseverance and poise in the face of adversity

3. Sacrifice

Total surrender of my individual desires and expectations in favor of the best interests of my team

4. Humility

All of my abilities are gifts from God to be fully enjoyed but not plagiarized

5. Forgiveness

Extending mercy to all who may wrong me or disappoint me: teammates, my coach, referees, opponents, or myself

6. Thankfulness

Gratitude to God for the experience of being an athlete

God has promised to fill our cups with ample portions of the more well-known victory, as long as we “seek first” the unseen victory.
